The NEW Lawn: Landscaping for Long Island Sound

We have an opportunity to redefine the way we value our yard landscape: what used to be designed for curb appeal and weekend puttering for many, now has the capacity to deliver so much more. And living in the watershed of Long Island Sound – an estuary of national significance – means that what we do really does make a difference. Let’s rethink the lawn and learn about what “native” is, why that matters, and how to attract and sustain wildlife, while also managing our landscapes to reduce water, fertilizer, and chemical use, all to the benefit of our local waterways and Long Island Sound.
